Health & Well-Being Initiatives at KSU

At Kennesaw State University, we believe providing access to mental health support services and resources is a campus-wide responsibility. We understand the importance of providing a safe environment, particularly during the pandemic. That’s why we are striving to ensure KSU remains a healthy and supportive community.

In August, Governor Brian Kemp announced Georgia allocated $11.5 million of the Governor’s Emergency Education Relief (GEER) funding, set aside by the federal CARES Act, to support mental health and student support services within the University System of Georgia (USG). These funds will pay for the expansion of services through three initiatives:

- JED Campus is an initiative designed to guide KSU through a collaborative strategic planning process to build upon existing student mental health, substance misuse, and suicide prevention efforts.
- Christie Campus Health’s Wellbeing@KENNESAW program will expand access to behavioral health resources for students both on and off-campus.
- Mini-grants for KSU that have the potential to expand access to mental health and wellbeing through a student to student wellness peer mentor program and mental health training for faculty, staff, and students.

The following articles in this newsletter will tell you more about these health and well-being initiatives at KSU.
Introducing Wellbeing@Kennesaw

We have seen your remarkable resilience during the COVID-19 pandemic, and we have also heard your request for more mental health services on campus. We are excited to tell you about new resources that will be available to KSU students.

We have launched Wellbeing@Kennesaw on our campus through a University System of Georgia partnership with Christie Campus Health, as an innovative way to enhance our mental health services and support your success.

Additional and enhanced mental health support services will begin early this semester and will provide all Kennesaw State University students with access to the following:

- 24/7/365 Mental health support line 470-578-6600
- Telehealth or in-person treatment options
- Expanded access to Psychiatric Services
- Personal Student Navigators
- Online Wellness Hub
- Expanded on-line resources.
Peer-to-Peer: Improving well-being through connection.

Those of us who work in student affairs, especially those who work in units focused on health and well-being, have long known that helping students get connected to campus and their peers are one of the best predictors of success and graduating as an Owl. To help students connect, the Division of Student Affairs is piloting a peer-to-peer coaching and mentoring program to student access in a more accessible location within the Carmichael Student Center later this semester. Our hope is that centralizing the service and having a more accessible space will increase helpfulness and utilization.

Wellness peer mentors will be trained on a wide variety of helping skills that will prepare them to support students struggling with some of the top impediments to mental health and well-being on campus. They will also be trained to see student wellness from a holistic perspective and armed with specific knowledge and skills for providing support such as motivational interviewing, active listening, goal setting, accountability, cultural competence, and skills assessment to address topics including:

- Stress
- Lack of motivation
- Loneliness
- Sleep
- Isolation
- Making & keeping a schedule
- Study skills
- Relaxation strategies
- Healthy eating
- Physical activity
- Substance misuse
- Nicotine cessation

Wellness peer mentoring will be offered in various ways, including virtual, in-person, walk-up, and scheduled meetings. Please stay tuned for additional details and ways that you can get connected. If you want to become a wellness peer mentor or like to learn more about the program, please email wellctr@kennesaw.edu.

A turbulent 2020 led many students to focus on their health and making resolutions to eat more healthfully in 2021. Before the semester begins in earnest, take a moment to reevaluate your nutrition goals by using the following suggestions from the Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics. Having a solid plan can help you win small victories that can lead to significant changes!

Start by Assessing Your Food Choices and Lifestyle
Keep track of what you eat and drink and how much physical activity you get so you can identify behaviors you would like to change.

One Large Goal Can Seem Overwhelming
Break big goals into smaller, more specific goals and include a list of realistic changes in your daily routine to achieve these particular goals. For instance, divide big and vague goals like "I will eat better" into smaller, more specific goals like "I will eat one more piece of fruit per day." Remember, while your goals should be challenging, they should also be reachable.

Make Sure the Goals You Set are Measurable
The goals must provide answers to "How much?" or "How many?" so you can easily review and track your progress. Evaluate your progress every week or two, and update your plan based upon your current progress or circumstances. Ensure you are giving yourself enough time to achieve each smaller goal, so you are not discouraged if you haven’t met them.

Seek Help from a Qualified Health Professional
A registered dietitian is your best source of reliable and up-to-date food and nutrition information. A dietitian can also help you determine measurable and achievable goals, as well as a plan to help you achieve them and support you along the way.

COUNSELING AND PSYCHOLOGICAL SERVICES
The staff of Counseling and Psychological Services (CPS) are here to help with all the struggles and challenges that come with college, including those that have been exacerbated by COVID-19. We know that the changes to our daily lives have had a necessary impact on all of our mental health. Increased uncertainty, loss of routines and support, and general disruption of our typical ways of navigating the world all add weight to our baseline level of functioning. These challenges can increase anxiety, depression, and interpersonal conflict, but they can also offer us the chance to examine our behaviors and practice new ways of being. We recommend the following to help students gain a sense of control and direction: Follow the safety guidelines; create a routine that works for you and keep it; set priorities and focus on these; stay connected to your support system; balance time spent on social media or other mediums that cause distress. Finally, make self-care a necessity; this includes protecting your sleep, putting good things in your body, and being active. All CPS services are available and being delivered via tele-mental health, and you can learn more at counseling.kennesaw.edu.

The Center for Young Adult Addiction and Recovery offers counseling services for students in recovery and to those recovery curious students struggling with substance misuse and process dependency (gambling, eating disorders, gaming).
