Sex in a Time of COVID-19

Data as of June 13 showed that the daily number of new coronavirus cases was climbing in Georgia. But with restrictions loosening and people emerging from quarantine, the question remains—is sex safe?

In short—it can be, but experts say any type of in-person sexual activity does carry some risk. But there are ways to have intimate contact and remain connected.

Let’s start with what we know right now. COVID-19 is a respiratory disease, so direct contact with saliva—through kissing, for example—can easily pass the virus. Recent studies have found COVID-19 in feces and semen. So this means that rimming (oral/anal contact) and anal sex may spread COVID-19 as well. Remember that condoms and dental dams reduce contact with saliva and feces during anal and oral sex or oral/anal contact.

- You are your safest sex partner. Masturbation will not spread COVID-19, especially if you wash your hands (and any sex toys) with soap and water for at least 20 seconds before and after sex.
- The next safest partner is someone you live with. Having close contact—including sex—with only a small circle of people helps prevent spreading COVID-19. All partners should be consenting.
- You should limit close contact—including sex—with anyone outside your household. If you do have sex with others, have as few partners as possible and pick partners you trust. Talk about COVID-19 risk like you would other safer sex topics (e.g. PrEP, condoms). So ask: Do they have symptoms or have they had symptoms in the last 14 days? Have they been diagnosed with COVID-19? People are considered likely no longer infectious if at least 10 days have passed since the day their symptoms started and if they have not had fever for at least three days.
- If you usually meet your sex partners online or make a living by having sex, consider taking a break from in-person dates. Video dates, sexting or chat rooms may be options for you.

Did you know it takes four days to fully recover from one hour of lost sleep? Remember, getting enough sleep improves learning and memory, so check out this article on sleep debt before you consider pulling an all-nighter for finals!

Sleep Debt: Can You Ever Catch Up?

Can you make up missed sleep the next night? The simple answer is yes.

Sleep is a restorative activity — while you sleep, your brain is cataloging information and healing your body.

TIPS FOR CATCHING UP ON LOST SLEEP

If you miss getting in enough hours of sleep, here are a few ways you can make it up.

- Take a power nap of about 20 minutes in the early afternoon.
- Sleep on the weekends, but not more than two hours past the normal time you wake up.
- Sleep more for one or two nights.
- Go to bed a little earlier the next night.

HOW TO GET ENOUGH SLEEP

- Go to sleep 15 minutes earlier each night until you reach your desired bedtime.
- Don’t sleep later than two hours past when you normally wake up, even on the weekends.
- Keep electronics in a separate room.
- Think over your evening routine to see if anything is keeping you up too late.
- Stop using electronics two hours before bedtime.
- Make sure your bedroom is dark and cool enough.
- Avoid caffeine late at night.
- Exercise no later than three hours before you go to bed.
- Avoid naps outside of 20-minute power naps.

NUTRITION COUNSELING

COUNSELING AND PSYCHOLOGICAL SERVICES
Take Control through COVID-19: Counselors at Counseling and Psychological Services (CPS) have been speaking to lots of students about their challenges though the COVID-19 quarantine. We know that your mental health can suffer given increased uncertainty, loss of routines and support and general disruption of our plans. While these changes can increase anxiety, depression and interpersonal conflict, they can also offer a unique chance to slow the pace of life and practice new ways of being. We recommend the following to help students gain a sense of control and direction: Follow the safety guidelines; make a new routine and keep it; set priorities and focus on these; create an online social life and keep it in balance; and make self-care a necessity (including good sleep, food and exercise). Finally, help is still widely available through tele-mental health platforms. See the CPS website for directions for scheduling appointments.

RECOVERY COUNSELING
The Center for Young Adult Addiction and Recovery offers counseling services for students in recovery and to those recovery curious students struggling with substance misuse and process dependency (gambling, eating disorders, gaming). We allow students to explore change.

For additional information, please email recovery@kennesaw.edu.
